ROUND 7 HIGHLIGHTS

BY WGM TATEV ABRAHAMYAN

GMS CARLSEN & CARUANA SHAKE HANDS AT THE BEGINNING OF ROUND 7

A large crowd gathered at the Saint Louis Chess Club to watch the encounter between the World Champion and his challenger. The face off attracted so much attention that only media was allowed in the playing hall for the first 15 minutes of the game, while the fans patiently waited their turn. The game eventually ended in a draw, but the final result does not tell all the drama that happened during the four hours of gameplay. As this was their final official classical game, the chess world will have to wait until November to see Carlsen and Caruana battle it out once again, this time for the World Championship crown. There were no other changes in the standings as the rest of the games were also drawn. Going into the final stretch of the tournament, Fabiano Caruana is still leading by half a point.

MAGNUS CARLSEN - FABIANO CARUANA

BY WGM TATEV ABRAHAMYAN, ANALYSIS BY CRISTIAN CHIRILA

CARLSEN // LENNART OOTES

The World Champion started the game with 1.e4, and Caruana decided to stay loyal to the Petroff. Carlsen managed to get a slight advantage out of what seemed like a dry position. His advantage kept growing even though Caruana played the best moves according to the engines. Carlsen was closing in on his opponent when he found himself low on time. The looming time trouble and Caruana's resourcefulness allowed the world championship contender to miraculously save the game. At one point, Carlsen went into the confession booth and made a shushing gesture, leaving everyone speculating the meaning behind it. He later explained that he thought he was already winning and wanted to have a little fun. Upon seeing the video, Caruana also assumed that his opponent was under the impression that the game was over, finishing his thought with "but it wasn't!" Carlsen was seemingly disappointed with his play, notably with his failure to be practical and make decisions. He remains half a point behind Caruana.

1.e4 [I believe this came as an early shock for Fabiano. Carlsen challenged the American in his pet line, the Petroff. Is this a preview of what we will see all throughout the world championship match? Only time will tell!]

1...e5 2.Nf3 Nf6 3.Nxe5 d6 4.Nf3 Nxe4 5.Nc3 Nxc3 6.dxc3 Be7 7.Be3 Nc6 8.Bc4 0-0 [8...Bg4 9.h3 Bh5 (9... White has a simple plan, he wants to launch a kingside offensive and checkmate. Black's plan is a bit more complicated, as there is no immediate relief in sight.]

17...Qc6 [17...f5 looks a bit weak, though the position might already require concrete play. 18.Qe3 c6 19.Qg3 Nf7 20.Nf3 Be7 21.Nd4 Bf6 22.Qd3?]

SERGEY KARJAKIN - SHAKHRIYAR MAMEDYAROV

BY WGM TATEV ABRAHAMYAN

This fascinating Najdorf would have been the game of the day were it not for the Carlsen-Caruana game. The 19-move theoretical line resulted in a complicated position, with equal chances for both players. Coming off of his third loss in this tournament, Karjakin really needed to stabilize while Mamedyarov, who is trailing the winner by half a point, needs to close the gap with a win. The game was near perfect, as both players found the best moves in the position. Eventually, the game petered out to a draw in a bishop endgame with not enough pawns on the board.

1.e4 c5 [Mamedyarov plays the Sicilian for the first time in this tournament]

2.Nf3 d6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 a6 6.h3 [This move has become more fashionable as of late and has been tried many times by Anand, Caruana and Carlsen]

6...e6 [6...e5 is the other main continuation. Whether Black wants his pawn on e6 or e5 is a matter of taste]

7.g4 h6 8.Bg2 g5 [intriguing move that has been played by none other than Garry Kasparov during the 2017 Saint Louis Rapid and Blitz! Black makes it clear that he won't be castling on the king side. The point is that he wants to take control of the dark squares, secure his knight on e5 and limit White's g2 bishop]

[8...Be7 9.h4 Nc6 is the standard continuation]

9.Be3 Nbd7 10.Qe2 Ne5 11.0-0 Nfd7 12.h4 Rg8 13.hxg5 hxg5 14.Kb1 b5 15.f4 [deviating from the Kasparov game]

LEVON ARONIAN - WESLEY SO

BY WGM TATEV ABRAHAMYAN, ANALYSIS BY GM VARUZHAN AKOBIAN

SO // LENNART OOTES

Aronian was clearly playing for a win and came up with interesting and unusual ideas in the middlegame. He chose a rare line in the Catalan and the players found themselves in an unknown territory after So's novelty on move 13. White had an advantage but did not play ambitiously enough. So made the correct decision of exchanging queens to transition into a passive endgame which was enough to hold the draw.

1.d4 [In this game, Aronian played quite interestingly with Kh1 and Rg1 -- clearly trying to push for a win.]

1...Nf6 2.c4 e6 3.Nf3 d5 4.g3 Be7 5.Bg2 0-0 6.0-0 dxc4 7.Qc2 a6 8.a4 Bd7 9.Qxc4 Bc6 10.Bf4 Bd6 11.Nc3 Bxf4 12.gxf4 a5 13.e3 [This position has only occurred 6 times. The most notable game featured a relatively quick draw between Ivanchuk and Dominguez.]

13...Nbd7N [13...Na6 14.Rac1 Nb4 15.Rfd1 Ra6 16.Qe2 Nbd5 17.Nb5 Ne7 18.Nd2 Bxg2 19.Kxg2 Nfd5 20.Nc4 Ng6 21.Kh1 Qe7 22.b3 Rd8 23.Rd2 Raa8 24.Rdc2 Nb4 25.Rd2 Nd5 26.Rdc2 ½-½ (26) Ivanchuk, V (2710)-Dominguez Perez, L (2723) Varadero 2016]

14.Kh1 Ra6 15.Rg1 Rb6 16.Qe2 Ne4!? [An interesting move, but perhaps not the most solid.]

[16...Qe7 17.Ne5 Nxe5 18.fxe5 Nd5 19.Bxd5 Bxd5+ 20.Nxd5 exd5 21.f4 f6=]

17.Qc2 f5?! [Risky and committal move weakens black's kingside. So's idea is to increase control over the e4 square and blockade white's central pawns.]

[17...Nxc3 18.bxc3 Qe7 19.Nd2 Bxg2+ 20.Rxg2 c5=]

18.Nxe4 Bxe4 19.Qc3 Bxf3!? [Not an easy decision to trade the bishop for the knight, but Wesley realized that in a closed type of position, his knight will not be worse than white's bishop.]

20.Bxf3 Nf6 21.Qxa5 Rxb2 22.Rg2 Nd5 23.Bxd5 exd5 [23...Qxd5? 24.Qxc7 Rf7 25.Qb8+ Rf8 26.Qe5±]

24.Qc3 Rb6 25.a5 Rb5 26.Rg5 [Too slow. White could have maintained better chances by playing more ambitiously.]

[26.Rgg1 Qe7 27.h3 Rf6 28.Rgc1 c6 29.Kh2 Qe4 30.Rg1<sup>2</sup>]

26...Rf6 27.Qc2 g6 28.h4 Qe7 29.h5 Qe4+! [An excellent decision by So. By exchanging the queens, black will be able to secure a draw quite comfortably.]

30.Qxe4 dxe4 31.Rgg1 c5 [Another interesting possibility was to play 31...Ra6! 32.hxg6 hxg6 33.Rac1 Rb2 34.Rxc7

44.Rxh6+ Kg7 45.Rb6 Rg1! [Even though white is up a pawn, the king cannot improve itself and this position is easily drawn for black.]

46.Kh4 Kf7 47.Kh3 Rg8 48.Kh2 Ke7 49.Rh6 Kf7 50.Rh3 Kf6 51.Rg3 Rh8+ 52.Kg2 Ra8 53.Rh3 Rg8+ 54.Kf1 Ra8 55.Rh6+ Ke7 56.Rc6 Ra1+ [Certainly an interesting game where Aronian had some chances from early on, but So defended precisely and achieved an easily drawn rook endgame.]

MAXIME VACHIER-LAGRAVE - HIKARU NAKAMURA

BY WGM TATEV ABRAHAMYAN, ANALYSIS BY GM ALEJANDRO RAMIREZ

VACHIER-LAGRAVE VS NAKAMURA // LENNART OOTES

Vachier-Lagrave was surprised by his opponent's decision to play a line that led him to a worse position. The Guicco Panno variation left white with the pair of bishops and a long term advantage with no risk. Nakamura suffered for most of the game, but true to his style resolved his problems in a tactical manner. The Frenchman's play was too straight forward, which allowed Nakamura to neutralize his advantage. Not finding a better continuation, Vachier-Lagrave exchanged the pair of rooks and one of his bishops for a knight. The resulting opposite color bishop endgame ended in an easy draw.

VISWANATHAN ANAND - ALEXANDER GRISCHUK

GRISCHUK // AUSTIN FULLER

This was one of the most balanced games of the day, with neither player making any big errors. The players essayed one of the most popular openings at the top level these days, the Giuoco Piano. In a closed position, the players maneuvered until move 20, when the pawn exchanges in the center opened the position. The change of the pawn structure resulted in piece exchanges, reeling the game towards a draw.
